N. W. M. POLICE.

If the North-West Mounted

Police hope still to retain their favorable position in the estimation of the public, which, up to the present time, they most undoubtedly have done, there must be some alteration in the manner in which they are distributed through the several posts. This question is forcibly presented to us by the fact that the country is becoming infested with tramps, and likely to become more so. A few nights past, some members of the tramp fraternity forced open the window of a stable in town, and appropriating all the rugs and horse blankets therein, proceeded to make themselves comfortable for the night in the hay mow, but in the early hours of the morning, when they considered it advisable to take their departure, left their erstwhile bed clothes just as they had made use of them.

The great danger in cases of this sort is that of fire, and we contend that the public should not be exposed to this danger, at all events when there is a possibility of lessening it by increased police protection. As it is, there is one man stationed at each post—some places have not even this protection. It is an utter impossibility for one man to be on the alert both night and day. Again, this solitary police man is at times away from his post for days at a time on other duty. It is neither fair to the man or to the public who pay for the maintenance of the force. We do not wish in any way to cast any disparagement on the force, we could not do it if we would, as we consider the N.W.M.P. as a force, a credit to any country, and we feel confident that this matter only wants to be brought to the notice of those in authority to be immediately remedied. We would suggest that two constables and two horses, at the very least, be stationed at those points that have only one at present.

There is at present in Russia a great dearth of doctors. The total population of the empire is 110,

000,000; the number of practising physicians 18,334—about one to every 6,000 of the population. In these countries we have one to every 1,500 or 1,600. How badly supplied with physic the great mass of Cossacks must be apparent when it is recollected that most of their doctors are located in the towns. Surely, here is a field for our overstocked home profession.

Perhaps one of the most notorious and disgraceful instances of selfishness on record is that of an American woman lately deceased. The creature in question died worth a million dollars, and it was found by her will that the entire sum was to be devoted to the erection of a mausoleum for her own remains.

Whether the law can prevent the execution of such a decree remains to be seen. In justice to humanity, the money should be so devoted as to counteract in a little measure the horrible example the testatrix bequeathed the world.

"The silence continued, and she felt that she must speak."

"I am sorry," she said, "but I do not know Mr. Clifford, though I have a very high opinion of him."

"It would be rather strange, my girl, if you could not know a man who has never said a word of love to you. Bless you, child! if you like him as you say, the rest will come easy. I fancy Michael will soon get you to see things in a different light. It's all right. You shall see him when he comes back; he only meant to leave a message, but that is easily settled."

A panic seized on Ruth. It seemed to her that this had all been planned between her father and his friend, and that she was to be taken for granted. A sense of friendliness oppressed her. She had been accustomed to reckon on her father as secure as she would, but she thought, she stood by her even had she been in the wrong instead of in the right. Surely she was in the right now. Her under lip trembled with a vague doubt. It had been wrong to keep this secret, but surely not wrong to engage herself to her lover; and at the thought Ruth's tender eyes filled with sudden tears. Ah! if he would come and own his love to her father! That would set everything straight, and the secret might be kept; there was no need to trust any else. A resolute feeling was fast growing toward Mr. Clifford. Ruth believed that he had set her father on to urge her to listen to his suit.

"It is not as if I said, 'father,' she tried to speak in her usual bright way. 'I should have said no to Mr. Clifford, even if he had spoken to me himself. I could never marry him; and really, just now I do not want to marry any one.'"

Her expression puzzled her father; he seemed to lack the frank earnestness to which she was accustomed.

"I do not want to press you, Ruth," he said, "but I think you ought to know how I stand. I told you that I did not own a single acre of land on the farm; I might have said I hardly own the clothes I wear, for nearly a year—longer than that perhaps—I have lived on borrowed money. I have been obliged to borrow for the repairs, also for the rent; and the security I have given is very unequal to the sums I have received."

Ruth was trembling from head to foot. A terrible sense of degradation had suddenly descended on the moral atmosphere in which she fancied she had lived. She seemed to hear Sally Vance's accusing voice, and her heart sank yet further. Was it possible that her father had flung away his money as Sally had said, and now wanted to use her as a means of restitution? But the idea was too shocking to her sense of duty to be harbored; she turned from it and rejected it as a direct temptation. A quick remorse followed for having so misjudged her father.

"We cannot pay this money," she said; "we must go on living in debt, can we, dear father?"

"Philip Bryant shrugged his shoulders." "It is easy to talk of paying," he said, "perhaps you will tell me how we are to do it—to pay all this money?"

Ruth flushed up to her eyes. "There is a way, I think," she said gently; but she did not say it. She started from seeing the pain she saw in her father's face.

"Suppose you give up the farm and the house—and everything to Mr. Clifford? He would not doubt find a purchaser for your things in the incoming tenant. A farm like Appledore will certainly be easy to let."

He was staring at her. She thought he looked frightened.

"And I should like to know," he said hoarsely, "what is to become of my house?"

"That will all come right," she said cheerfully, carried out of herself by the service she had proposed. "We shall not be allowed to want. I can work, and you are a cleverer father, you might perhaps get an agency, or something of that sort."

Before she could her father began to walk up and down the room with quick, uncertain steps. Bridget opened the door, put in her head, and announced that dinner was ready; but neither father nor daughter heeded the summons.

At last Bryant came close to her, his eyes and cheeks flaming with anger.

"You would like to turn me into a servant, would you? I, who have been my own master ever since I can remember? Who tells you, Ruth, that I am not a man? Or for you have been too much indulged to find it easy to take your orders from another person?"

He turned away from her, and again walked to the farther end of the room, clapping his hand on his forehead.

Ruth followed him and put her hand on his shoulder.

"Please do not be angry with me," she said. "I did not mean to be unkind just now, only I did not find the right way to say it. Kiss me, dear father! Say you are not angry with me!"

Though her voice was full of sorrowful tenderness he had kept his face turned away from her. Now he pushed her away.

"Leave me alone!" he said angrily. "I do not want you, you are a waste of my own way; you would not yield an inch of it to help me; you want to drive me like one of the sheep." Then, as she tried to be heard: "I wish you would go. I prefer to be alone. I don't wish to be disturbed."

Even then, his face was not turned away from her. He went to the window looking on to the farm-yard and stood there till he heard the door open and close again. He looked round, sighed with relief at finding himself alone, and walking to the fire-place he struck a match and lit the blackening log fiercely with the poker, till it sent out showers of bright red sparks.

Ruth had gone slowly upstairs. She had a curious feeling of guilt, but she turned from thought of anything must be done at once. Her young thoughts were so full of the idea of consulting Mr. Clifford; she shrank from the idea of seeing him again. All at once she remembered that Mr. Bevington had studied farming a good deal during his stay; she had seen him, and she was sure he would give her some advice as to the best way in which she should veil her passionate longing to see him again. The knowledge of Michael Clifford's name seemed to wake a new life in her little table and board to write. She asked her lover to release her from his promise of secrecy. She said that her father was in so much trouble that she could not feel justified in keeping a secret from him, and she knew it would cheer him to know that his future was assured. She did not speak of Clifford; it seemed useless. She told her lover the joy it would give her to see him again.

A sudden cry startled her; she hurried to the door and listened. This time she heard distinctly.

"Miss Bryant! Miss Ruth! Come! come quick!"

It was Bridget's voice, and Ruth hurried downstairs, hardly knowing what she expected to find there.

The sitting-room door stood open, and Ruth paused a moment before she went in. Her father lay on the floor; he looked rigid and lifeless. Bridget stood beside him, and overcame with terror that he had not even noticed the fact that he was round his throat.

"He's gone!" the woman cried as Ruth came in. "The poor soul's gone and we're too late to save him!"

Bridget stood still, aghast at her young mistress's promptitude.

Ruth knelt down beside her father and pressed his head and shirt, and then bid the trembling, terrified woman fetch John Bird and Peter, the cowman. She had seen

LOVE'S GOLDEN LINKS.

MARRIAGE OF PRINCESS VICTORIA AND DUKE OF HESSE.

In the Presence of Queen Victoria and a Distinguished Assemblage of Royalty—Princesses Led in the Chapel Decorations.

A despatch from Coburg, Germany, says:—Queen's weather accompanied her Majesty of England and the sun smiled in prophetic fashion upon the Ducal pair who were united to-day in the golden bonds of holy wedlock.

THE WEDDING PROCESSION.

In the wedding procession to the chapel, the Duchess of Saxe-Coburg, mother of the bride, was escorted by Emperor William of Germany and followed by ex-Emperor Frederick, who walked alone. The Prince of Wales and the Czarevitch came next, walking side by side. Queen Victoria was escorted by her son, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, the father of the bride, and was seated in an arm chair in the front row of seats semi-circularly arranged.

The Emperor William was occupied by Emperor William, next to Queen Victoria, seated the Duchess of Coburg. The corresponding seats on the other side of the aisle were occupied by the Prince of Wales, ex-Emperor Frederick, and the Czarevitch. The other high personages attending occupied the three rows of seats in the rear of the church.

The bride and groom entered the church, a signal was given, in obedience to which all the bells in the town pealed simultaneously, and when the hymn was changed a salute of 21 guns was fired. Following German precedents, there were no bridesmaids, but the bride was supported by her younger sisters.

The private chapel of the Schloss was decorated for the occasion, and the ceremony was performed by the Bishop of Hildesheim, assisted by the Bishop of Osnabrück, the Bishop of Verden, and the Bishop of Stade. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a large number of guests, and the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, the father of the bride, was seated in an arm chair in the front row of seats semi-circularly arranged.

THE CEREMONY.

HYENA ON THE LOOSE.

Inconvenient Showaway on British Steamship.

The Nairnshire called as usual at Las Palmas, says the London Daily News, and there a hyena, which had been sent from Cape Colony and consigned to the London office of the West Africa Company, was taken on board. It was confined in a wooden box, or cage, three feet long, three feet broad and two feet six inches high. The front of the box had been fastened carefully with simple half-inch nails, with the result that two days after leaving Las Palmas the hyena tore its way out of the cage and took refuge among some casks of fruit, &c., underneath the fore-castle deck, a space 35 by 15 feet, and eight feet high. There it remained for five days, to the terror and danger of all on board, for it moved about freely, and no one knew at what moment he might meet its face to face.

Captain Olsen's first impulse was to shoot the dangerous brute, but finally decided as it was a valuable animal, and properly consigned, to endeavor to deliver it alive. In pursuance of this policy, and prudently bearing in mind also that a wild animal is always more savage and dangerous when hungry, Captain Olsen—carrying a loaded short-barrelled revolver—went to the side of the man armed with a revolver at full cock—was escorted into the fore-castle hold by one of the seamen, who threw within convenient reach of the beast's chomping jaws a large quantity of mutton. Though nothing untoward occurred, Captain Olsen was naturally anxious to be relieved of his inconvenient charge, and on arriving at Gravesend on Friday a telegram was sent to the West Africa Company to send and fetch the hyena, which was duly done. It was shot. The company's officers were closed for the holidays, so that nothing could be done.

When the Nairnshire arrived in Victoria Dock it was decided to make an attempt to capture the hyena, and Mr. Samuel Lowe, Dairy Expert to the New Zealand Government, who had boarded the steamer in the exercise of his official duties, pluckily volunteered to take charge of the operations, being assisted therein by Mr. Caird, Mr. Moore, Mr. Martin, Mr. Hargreaves, and Captain Olsen. By Mr. Lowe's directions the fore-castle hold was gradually cleared of its cargo, while a number of sailors stood by with sacks and boards. The hyena resisted these operations by snarling and showing his teeth and occasionally snapping as though to spring upon his intruders. Finally, however, he was got into a corner behind a large cask, and a seaman, making a dexterous throw, managed to get a rope around its neck. While the beast was struggling in the coils a second rope was thrown around him, and the cask being then rolled away, the hyena was dragged into his cage amid the loud cheers of his amateur hunters.

THE WEDDING BREAKFAST.

The wedding breakfast was served in the throne-room of the palace. There was a superb display of gold and silver plate and flowers. The German Emperor proposed the health of the bridegroom, and the bride, whom he called his dear cousin, and the Grand Duke of Hesse responded. After the breakfast the bride donned a travelling coat of white and grey-blue cloth. The wedding cake, which was a magnificent affair, was cut by the bride and groom, and the first piece was given to the bridegroom. The cake was a magnificent affair, and the first piece was given to the bridegroom.

DIAMOND MAKING.

Efforts to Increase the Size of the Artificial Gems.

It is now more than a year since the French chemist, Henri Moissan, succeeded in making a white diamond. The jewel was exceedingly small, and its quality not all that could be desired; but it would scratch a ruby, burn at the right temperature, showed the proper structure under microscopic scrutiny, and was generally transparent. Since then Mr. Moissan has been trying to see whether he could not gain something in the size of his productions.

The method employed in these experiments, it will be remembered, was to mix carbon and iron at a high temperature and then let the compound cool. It has long been known that the heavier of these two substances will absorb more of the lighter one when heated intensely than it can hold in intimate association after being cooled. The carbon is then deposited in little pockets in the iron. But the form in which such deposits are usually found is graphite. Mr. Moissan's success early in 1905 was a result of his being able to secure, by means of an electric furnace, a higher degree of heat than other experimenters had found it possible to employ. He raised his composition to a temperature of 5400° Fahrenheit, at which point his little crucible of lime showed signs of softening. Graphite and minute black diamonds were discovered, distributed in the metal, on cooling; but besides these there were tiny white crystals, which met successfully the various tests to which he subjected them to prove their identity with white diamonds.

At a meeting of the Academy of Sciences in Paris last month Mr. Moissan said that it had occurred to him that the extreme smallness of his diamonds might be due to the way in which he chilled the iron. If, when this had been solidified, he plunged the red-hot ingot into water, a film of vapor would surround the metal and check radiation. The chemist, therefore, had tried the effect of immersing the iron in a bath of water, but this did not work satisfactorily. It now occurred to him that if he melted lead, however, he secured better results; and now he gets diamonds, only half a millimetre in diameter, to be sure, but larger than any obtained before. These, of course, have no special value, but it is interesting to know that the Frenchman is still working away at the subject, and is making a little headway.

Moreover, these experiments suggest various possibilities as to the methods by which natural diamonds have been formed. What was the matrix which once held the carbon? Probably not iron. And was the carbon crystallized by a sudden cooling of the vapor? If so, how large a mass of matter was chilled at once, and what was the whole operation? Light on these questions may be afforded by such researches as those of Mr. Moissan.

MODERN TELESCOPES.

The Great Progress Made in the Manufacture of Instruments.

In an informal address before the Boston Scientific Society Mr. Alvan C. Clark, the famous telescope maker, spoke of the progress of the earlier astronomers, among them that of Galileo, who was the first one to apply this instrument to celestial observation, showing some of the difficulties under which the earlier opticians labored. The difficulty lay in the fact that in its passage through the lens the light of the stars becomes separated into the different colors of which light is composed, and each of these colors comes to a different focus with the telescope tube. The result is a blurred image, and the telescope is of little use. The first step was the invention of the reflecting telescope, different forms of which were made by different men, in the manufacture of which delicate processes were undergone, and with which the most remarkable results were achieved. Mr. Clark explained the means whereby the older opticians tried to avoid this dispersion of light by means of long tubes, and paid tribute to Dollond, the English optician, who first gave to the world the achromatic telescope. In this combination of lenses the imperfection of the image is eliminated to a large degree by the use of a second lens, the imperfections of which are equal in amount to those of the first lens, but of opposite in quality or direction.

Mr. Clark reviewed briefly the story of the increase in size of the telescope, a story of exceeding interest, since this increase has come to us mainly through the efforts and efficient work of the firm, of which he is now the sole remaining member. The aperture of fifteen inches was for many years the maximum, but of late years, with increased facilities for the manufacture of large discs and experience in handling of the same, the aperture of telescopes has been rapidly increased, and we have now the great Lick telescope of thirty-six inches and the still larger lenses of forty inches diameter, upon which his is now at work. This increase in aperture, in connection with the assignment of definition which is the care of the optician of these days, is possible, gives great opportunity for the use of high magnifying powers, and it is estimated that the Lick telescope is capable of showing at least one hundred million stars. Mr. Clark's address was a very interesting one, and he was well received by the audience.

THE WEDDING BREAKFAST.

Town & Country Callings.

—How many trees will be planted today?

—Capital growing weather, and wheat all sown.

—Mr. Jas. Scott proceeded east on Monday night.

—J. Balfour, Indian Head, was in town on Monday.

—Miss Brodie, Fort Qu'Appelle, went east on Monday night.

—Inspector Constantine, Mooseman, was in town on Saturday.

—E. C. McDonald, fruit, etc., Moose Jaw, business closed out.

—The Herd By-law goes into full force and effect to-day, May 10th.

—There was a meeting of the Municipal Council on Saturday night.

—A. M. McLane, manager of the Sunbeam Farm, was in town on Thursday last.

—Doctor Bell received a telegram on Friday night, ordering him back to Regina.

—The Medicine Hat Printing and Publishing Co., Medicine Hat, has been incorporated.

—The building season is commencing to boom, several new buildings are to be erected.

—Messrs. McDougall and Laskowski have gone west to purchase a car load of polo ponies.

—President Van Horne passed through Qu'Appelle on a special train at 8:30 a.m. Saturday.

—Messrs. Cowan and Edwards have imported two brush breakers for the use of the Municipality.

—A car load of shingles for the new station has arrived. Are they going to commence on the roof first?

—The Rev. Mr. Chase, D.D., who has been visiting at his sister's (Mrs. H. Starr), returned east on Friday night.

—Wheat on the Canadian Alliance Farm last year averaged 204 bushels to the acre, and sold for 45¢ cents per bushel.

—Mr. Johnston, who drove Dick French, when he made his mark, has arrived, and will take his old charge in hand for the coming season.

—Mr. McCauley, of the Winnipeg Saturday Night, who has been in town in the interests of his paper, gave us a friendly call.

—Mr. J. Price is once more about to take up his residence in our midst. He is now erecting a concrete dwelling on Qu'Appelle Street.

—"OUR TIME." You have omitted to endorse your name with your communication, which precludes the mention of the interesting matter.

—Rev. Mr. Mellick, Superintendent of Baptist Missions, preached morning and evening on Sunday last in McLane's Hall to large congregations.

—The new hotel at Balgonie is finished and ready for business. The proprietors intend making application to a House at the meeting of the License Commissioners in June.

—Fencing is becoming quite a fashionable amusement with the ladies just now. It is to be hoped that after having overcome their timidity and gained proficiency, that they will not continue to hide themselves in the shades of night.

—We are requested to notify the public of an error that has been made in drawing out the programme for the Queen's Birthday races. Instead of the prizes for the green trot or pace being $70 and $45, it should be $50 and $30.

—The Synod of the Diocese of Qu'Appelle will meet here on Wednesday, May 30th. Tea will be provided by the Ladies Guild for the members of the Synod, and in the evening there will be a social entertainment, open to all, in the Town Hall.

—The penitentiary are becoming quite a nuisance, also a source of danger. On Sunday night last, one or more of them opened the window of a stable in town, and entering there, made themselves as comfortable as possible in the hay mow, appropriating all the rugs and horse blankets for the purpose.

—Racing is the order of the day; seems quite like old times. A race took place last Thursday night between Moriarty's Babe and Dickson's Whisky, distance 600 yards. Babe proved the winner with some yards to spare. On the following night, two races took place: one between Whiffin's Baldy and Mac-Caul's Grey Finer (the winner of the Mooseman Derby); however, Baldy proved too swift for the little grey. The second race was between Trase's Kathleen Mavourneen and Craig's Molly Astor. This race proved rather a surprise to the owner of Kathleen, as Molly first caught the judge's eye.

—Mr. and Mrs. Kirkland, Deep Lake, were in town on Tuesday.

—Mrs. Graham returned from Swift Current on Tuesday morning.

—The creamery will start operating for the season about the 20th of the month.

—Mr. R. J. Molloy, night operator, went west to Saskatoon Monday night on a visit.

—Ladell, the hangerman, has arrived at Regina to officiate at the execution of the two condemned Italians.

—Mr. J. C. Blackwood removed his family back to his farm at Blackwood on Tuesday. Mr. Blackwood will himself follow in a few days.

—We are sorry to have to report the serious illness of Mr. R. Johnston's little girl. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston have the sympathy of the community.

—Mr. Bonner, who last year removed from the Pleasant Plains, to take up a farm in the neighborhood of the Soo Railway, has returned, quite satisfied to make a new beginning on his original holding.

—This License District has been divided into three. We understand that Mr. Brine, Fort Qu'Appelle, has been appointed License Inspector for this district, which comprises Qu'Appelle, Fort Qu'Appelle and Indian Head.

—The Rev. E. T. Carter will preach next Sunday in Qu'Appelle at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. At the afternoon service new members will be received and the Lord's Supper administered. There will be no preaching at outside appointments. All members and adherents of circuit cordially invited.

—Attention is directed to a notice in another column, calling a public meeting at the Leland Hotel, on Friday night next at 8:30 o'clock, of all interested in the Queen's Birthday Celebration. A full attendance is requested. Business—To make all the final arrangements for the day. The committee's efforts have been entirely successful, greatly exceeding their expectations, and all that will be necessary to insure a most enjoyable day is good weather.

—Waghorn's Guide for May brings to our notice all the changes in rail services, new post offices, railway time cards, lake and ocean steamship sailings, rates, etc. A further list of school districts in Manitoba is published from G to L. Encouraged by the appreciation with which the tables of Masonic, Odd-fellows and Foresters lists of lodges have been received, the publishers have added the "Knights of Pythias" of the Orange and A.O.U.W. societies in subsequent issues, if sufficient interest is shown in their publication. The usual maps of the city and province accompany the issue, and the business tables contain all additions and changes to date.

INDIAN HEAD.

The Municipal Council will meet on Saturday.

Farmers are nearly all through seeding wheat.

Inspector Constantine was here on Saturday on official business.

Rev. J. K. Welsh and Mr. Crawford left for Regina on Tuesday to attend a meeting of the Presbytery.

The cricket, football and baseball clubs will re-organize, meetings of each having been called to that effect.

J. Anderson, cattle buyer, shipped four carloads of prime cattle to the British Columbia market from this point last week.

To the disgust of local sportsmen, geese, though plentiful, are not as approachable as earlier in the season. Come, too, keep without range, and are hard to stalk.

Sam Lee Y, the intelligent alien from the Celestial Kingdom, who washes for the boiled shirt brigade here, gave a finished acrobatic and juggling performance on Monday before a select audience. Sheriff Murphy, of Mooseman, introduced the performer.

Under the thorough supervision of Mrs. A. Davidson, the Commercial is undergoing its spring cleaning. Paint, new carpet and wall paper have worked a transformation, and the general appearance of cleanliness will cause the hotel to rank high with favorite stop-over points affected by "commercialists" and others who travel the main line.

"I see nothing to prevent sheep raising proving a success around Indian Head," remarked a dealer the other day, who has wintered a band of 188 on the Bell Farm. "Mine came through well, and the increase this year is 60 lambs. The carcasses net me 10 cents per pound dressed, and there is always a good local demand." Mr. Wm. Dixon, an enthusiastic breeder of Shropshire downs, in this vicinity, speaks in a similar strain, and intends to go more extensively into sheep.

An instance of canine attachment, though perhaps lacking in sagacity, happened at one of the elevators last week. Mr. Boyd, the dog's owner, had been working upon a scaffold repairing the outside of the structure. At noon, stepping within, he descended, but on reaching the platform missed his dog, which had been left in one of the upper stories, and turned back. The dog evidently missed his master about the same time, for appearing on the scaffold he gave one look and without hesitation leapt to the ground, a distance of 55 feet fully. The jump resulted in a dislocated leg, which Mr. Boyd immediately reset, and after one day's rest, save for a bandaged limb, the animal was around as usual.

PHEASANT FORKS.

Mr. C. Buckler and family have left this locality for Philadelphia.

Mr. E. Burdett left on Monday for England with the best wishes from his many friends.

Mr. Wallace Symington left on Tuesday for the north, where he will take charge of a school.

We understand that up to date no tenders have been received for the construction of the barrel stave sidewalk from the bridge to the store.

Mr. D. J. Cantelon, J.P., of Lethbridge, passed through the town recently, en route for the German Colony, on business.

THE WORLD OVER.

There are almost four times as many Americans living in England as there are in France.

Argentina has a "Wheat King"—an Italian immigrant of the name of Guazone—whose land is in the south of the Province of Buenos Ayres. His latest harvest crop of wheat was grown on 66,720 acres.

A wonderful nugget of tin has been discovered in the mines of North Dundas, Tasmania. It is estimated to weigh 5,400 pounds. The assay of a small piece shows that the large mass of ore contains 67 per cent. of metallic tin.

It is stated in a recent number of Bradstreet that "Convicts from the New York State prison at Dannemora have constructed 3,400 feet of macadam road, and 4,050 feet of cobblestone gutter, set 5,000 feet of curbstones, and made 4,650 feet of earth sidewalk since June last."

Lord Roseberry's first speech was delivered when he was fourteen years of age, at a luncheon to volunteers given by his grandfather. He had even then his cool self-possession, and that remarkable glance of the eye which seems at once to take the measure of a man and to value him accordingly.

One secret of the willow's marvellous tenacity of life is to be found, perhaps, in the fact that it sends its roots a long way in search of moisture. It was discovered, after an important aqueduct had been laid in, that the walls were cracked and filled for many feet with roots. These roots, it was discovered, came from willows at least thirty feet distant.

Since his retirement, Mr. Gladstone has received many hundreds of tributes from admirers all over the United Kingdom, and the gifts are still pouring in. He has received several dozen walking canes and umbrellas. A number of admirers clubbed together and sent him a handsome armchair, and many more pretentious presents have come to him. The tributes have been entirely spontaneous, no suggestion of such a thing having been made in the newspapers until their number became notable.

It is confidently believed that petroleum has been struck in Somersetshire, England, in such quantity as will well pay for working. The discovery of oil was made some weeks ago, and experts have since been making experiments in the region. Professor Redwood, the "chief petroleum expert in England," says better results have so far attended the experiments than have been noted in some of the best American oil fields.

The largest dynamo the world ever saw is now being made at the river works of the Thomson-Houston Electric Company in Lynn. When completed it will weigh 32,000 pounds, and it is to be used by the Philadelphia Traction Company. The casting was made recently, and it required two of the great open hearth furnaces to fill the mould. When the rough work is completed, the dynamo will be shipped to Schenectady to be finished.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE TONIC

STOMACH AND LIVER CURE

The Wonderful HEALTH BUILDER & NERVE FOOD

This Remedy cures Indigestion and Dyspepsia, as well as all Nervous Disorders, by acting on the Nerve Centres at the base of the brain. It has been absolutely demonstrated, that two-thirds of our diseases and ailments, are due to the deranged Nerve Centres at the base of or within the brain.

SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE IS A WONDERFUL CURE FOR INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

Loss of Appetite, Weight and Tenderness in the Stomach, Sour Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Wind upon the Stomach, Nausea and Sick Stomach, Sick-Headache, Hiccough, Water Brash, Heartburn, Vertigo and Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Frightful Dreams, etc.

The Stomach suffers more than any of the other organs from disease, because into it are taken so many indigestible and irritating substances as articles of food. In its great effort to digest these, it soon becomes weakened and diseased. Under such circumstances, it is not wonderful that so many complain of indigestion and weak stomachs. When the stomach fails to digest and assimilate the food, the whole body falls into a state of weakness and decay. For Nature has decreed that the body must constantly receive nutriment through the stomach, to repair the waste of tissue constantly going on in the system.

The South American Nervine

Is probably the greatest remedy ever discovered for the cure of all Chronic Stomach troubles, because it acts through the nerve centres. It gives marked relief in ONE DAY, and very soon effects a permanent cure. The first bottle will convince anyone that a cure is certain.

WHAT EX-MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT, REUBEN E. TRUMAN, SAYS.

I have been for about ten years very much troubled with indigestion and dyspepsia, have tried a great many different kinds of patent medicines, and have been treated by a number of physicians and found no benefit from them. I was recommended to try SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE. I obtained a bottle, and I must say I have found very great relief, and have since taken two more bottles, and now feel that I am entirely free from indigestion, and would strongly recommend all my fellow sufferers from the disease, to give SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE an immediate trial.

It will cure you.

A MINISTER OF THE GOSPEL SPEAKS.

Peterboro, Ontario, June 27th, 1893.

DEAR SIR, I have much pleasure in recommending the great South American Nervine to all who are afflicted as I have been, with nervous prostration and indigestion. I found very great relief from the very first bottle, which was strongly recommended to me by my druggist. I also induced my wife to use it, who, I must say, was completely run down and was suffering very much from general debility. She found great relief from SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE, and also cheerfully recommends it to her fellow sufferers.

Sick Headache

Is dependent on deranged nerve centres and indigestion. Hence its cure must come through building up the Nervous System and curing the Stomach. SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE will absolutely cure this dreaded malady and prevent its return.

A SURE CURE FOR ST. VIRUS'S DANCE.

CRANFORDVILLE, Indiana.
My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with St. Virus's Dance. She was refused to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to hold her in my arms. Doctors and neighbors gave up. I was advised to give her SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE, and the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of her nervousness, and finally improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE the greatest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to everyone. MRS. W. T. EMMINGS, Cranfordville, Indiana.
